In today's climate, security is a primary concern for most people thinking of asset protection and personal safety. At Steelway we have recognised the need for high security products that provide maximum protection from not only minor vandalism or opportunistic thieves, but also aggressive intrusion or terrorist attack.

Steelway Protect, is a new and continually expanding range of fabricated steel high security products. The range currently includes a multitude of products varying levels of specification, certification and accreditation. The flexibility of the Protect range is that it enables you to choose the right product, with the right level of security, in a cost effective manner for the application area you are protecting. It may be a project in the public or private sector, a telecommunication, power or utility project.
